Customizable Children's Story Set to Continue Innovation

November 28, 2009, Hermosa Beach, CA

See It's Me! Books has just released its third book in a line of customizable children's stories which allow customers to put the whole family into tales that are as adaptable as they are charming. This third effort by the company allows a child to read about him or herself as the family spends a day at the beach.

Adrienne Green and husband Harley have crafted a personal business with this line of books. Each short tale stars a child or children – presumably the recipient of the book – who can be customized to the buyer's liking. The Green couple's vision is to put a real child into real situations, linking the child's imagination to his or her actual life experiences. Adrienne's dream is for each child to feel that their distinct situation should not be hidden but rather celebrated as special and just as valid as any other lifestyle. Seeing that many of today's children do not have such a supportive environment, Harley wanted to create a book series that could help fill the void. He states "coming from a divorced family, it was often impossible to find books that related to my personal experiences. See It's Me Books offers customization for any family structure and ethnicity, giving people a sense of belonging."

The company began with the Greens' first book, entitled "[Your Child's] Very Special Christmas Story." and continued with "[Your Child's] Fun Family Trip!" The same high level of customization and delightful artistry is continued in "[Your Child's] Day at the Beach"
